NOTICE.

A MAN'S character should be judged from what it has been before, and by that means elegance or worthlessness can be discovered. A story should be judged by its true or false bearings, so that right and wrong may be distinguished. These remarks apply to the case in which Messrs Tsang and Woo Lin Tak were, on the 27th day of the 10th moon last year (24th November 1875), slandered by Lai Ming Chun.

Messrs Tsang Shun Yee and Woo Lin Tak have been residing for more than ten years in Hongkong and have always been employed in representing Nam Pak Hong's in their transactions with foreigners. While their character stands high, their conduct is excellent, and they have for a long time been respected by both Chinese and foreigners. They have not only not borne a name that is approaching to anything improper, but they have not in the course of all their actions done anything objectionable. Unexpectedly, however, slander came upon them unawares, but of course, when virtue stands high, reproach will come. They were therefore falsely charged by Lai Ming Chun's letter, which was void of all truth, with selling people for emigration abroad. They are indeed labouring under a false imputation from which it is now difficult for them to clear themselves. Our office, therefore, in punishing Lai Ming Chun for having done what he ought not to have done, orders him—and he consents—to pay the sum of $600 for the amount of legal expenses; he has also by way of punishment to pay $25 into the Poor Box for the benefit of the Hongkong Poor. He is further punished by having to pay the expenses of advertising in the Chinese and foreign newspapers in the Colony, three of each, for the period of one month, a notice which will bring before the public his sin in this defamation. Reparations like these will, perhaps, allay in a measure the indignation which Messrs Tsang and Woo feel.

When a man finds fault with others he ought in the first instance to enquire whether he himself is unblemished. Now Lai Ming Chun, as a man, is not one who is numbered among the gentry, nor is his name pronounced by the lips of the illustrious. Yet he falsely dilates in slanderous language and spreads diffusedly by word of mouth stories to the detriment and pollution of (the good name of) Messrs Tsang and Woo. It was right therefore that Messrs Tsang and Woo sought to sue him in the Courts of Justice, and he was on the eve of being punished by the utmost penalty of the law. Fortunately, however, Messrs Tsang and Woo's magnanimity is expansive as the sea and as spacious as the ocean, and they deal with people liberally; with that end in view, they therefore prefer, instead of punishing him, as he rightly deserves, to forgive him of the enormous crime of which he has been guilty. Having ceased litigation now, they have no resentment against any one, and by so doing, they cherish the friendly tie that exists amongst the Chinese clans. They have also shown that in doing this they are inflicting a lenient punishment for the sake of a great warning. They are indeed fully sustaining the benevolent principles of the great men, and for this act of theirs, may the happiness (or good fortune) of Messrs Tsang and Woo never grow less.

THE UNIVERSAL CIRCULATING HERALD (TSUN WAN YAT PO).

Hongkong, February 19, 1876. mc19

NOTICE IN EXPLANATION OF A SLANDER.

THE principles of right or wrong will reveal themselves in course of time, and this saying is clearly set forth in the History of China. When undue reliance is placed on statements by word of mouth, a good argument is always wanting, and this is what the Book of Changes has always guarded people against. If a man is not guilty of anything seriously wrong, is it likely that he will submit himself to be killed?

With regard to Lai Ming Chun, he is indeed a bare-faced fellow, and one who has no regard for anything. On the 27th day of the 10th Moon last year (24th November 1875), he slandered Messrs Tsang Shun Yee and Woo Lin Tak by falsely accusing them of being engaged in the nefarious trade of selling people for the purposes of emigration, and that in their transactions they were in fact kidnappers. And finally, he recorded the same in the Tsun Wan Yat Po, (The Universal Circulating Herald), so that Messrs Tsang and Woo had thought of suing him before the local authorities, so that he might be punished for libelling people's character. Fortunately for him, however, Lai Ming Chun learnt in time of his own wrong in slandering the character of good men, and now he has voluntarily consented to pay the penalty of bearing the legal expenses in the sum of $600, and to pay also (into the poor box) $25, for the relief of the Hongkong poor; also, from his own funds, to pay the costs of inserting in the Chinese and foreign newspapers, three of each, for the period of one month, an article, in order to redeem himself from what he has been guilty of. But this, nevertheless, would not actually be sufficient to cover the enormity of his sin. The reason why Messrs Tsang and Woo condescended to these terms was because they had been advised by intimate friends, who urged that, insomuch as both parties were Chinese, how could they, Messrs Tsang and Woo, have the heart to see him (Lai Ming Chun) put in a gaol of the foreigners? So that it would be far better that they should of Graesel & Sphingard, of Kalgan; three immense vultures, two large eagles, a wild cat, and the skin of a hammerhead; all in fair condition. The latter especially is a novelty, for he generally keeps up in inaccessible regions. One of the great vultures first alluded to, had in his claws a nearly entire hare. Some of these specimens are now being mounted, and will well repay a visit.

The theatre of the Club Concordia, and probably the whole building, narrowly escaped destruction by fire on the afternoon of March 10th. About half-past three, volumes of smoke were seen by a Municipal policeman on duty in the neighbourhood, issuing from a portion of the roof abutting on some Chinese houses; and an alarm being given, the fire-bells were rung, causing a speedy turn out of the various fire-brigades, &c. Luckily, their services were not required; for before their arrival, Mr. Baffy, the manager, with the assistance of his Chinese servants, had extinguished the fire by means of a few buckets of water thrown from the roof of an adjoining out-house. The ignition is believed to have been caused by a firework bomb (such explosion having been heard during the forenoon) alighting on the theatre roof, which is composed only of shingle underlined with felt; and which, on examination, was found to have been burnt nearly through to the ceiling, in one place.

At the annual meeting of the North-China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, held on March 3rd the following new members were elected: Mr. A. E. Hippesley, resident; and M. Coignet, non-resident.—Dr. Henderson, Dr. Jamieson; Dr. Pichon, Messrs. Hugh Sutherland, A. J. How, C. Skatchoff, W. M. Cooper, J. P. Martin, M. Artindale, and H. Hertz were proposed as members.—The following were elected as officers: President, W. H. Medhurst, Esq., H. B. M.'s Consul; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. A. Wyllie and T. W. Kingmill; Hon. Sec. T. G. Smith; Librarian, and Treasurer, Mr. J. Haas; Curator, Mr. J. P. Martin; Members of Council, Rev. J. Thomas, Messrs. A. J. Little, H. J. Hollingsworth, G. C. Stent, J. E. Reding, and Dr. Macgregor.—Mr. Wyllie moved that Mr. Corder, who is shortly leaving for Europe, should be empowered to represent the Society, and to specially convey the thanks of the Society to the Société-Asiatique of Paris, for their recent valuable gift.—The various reports were read and adopted, the Treasurer's showing a balance in hand of $266.12.

TIENTZIN,
The solemn band once more re-echoes to the squeak of laden barrows and the grunts of panting coolies, and piles of merchandise begin to be dumped in miscellaneous heaps, showing that commerce is not yet extinct.

There is a general feeling of expectancy in regard to the matters under discussion between China and England, and there are not wanting those who could, if they would, a hideous tale unfold, of all that is more or less likely to be developed. But the amount actually known is not sufficient even to serve as a frame-work for those deposits of mud known as Reuter's telegrams. Somewhere along the coast of China there must be a set of depraved individuals who make a point of collecting all the scraps of news, developed in any quarter, relating to frictions between foreigners and Chinese, and telegraphing the same home, there to appear in the most appalling forms, as indicies of the state of things in China. If a missionary makes an excursion into the interior, and some boys throw mud at the boat, a Japanese paper is sure to italicize an item to the effect that Mr. Blank has been stoned by a Chinese mob. A case of this kind occurred under our own observation, within a few months. And now comes an American daily, publishing an "Associated Press Dispatch" with much sensational rubbish about China, and this precious moral which has no doubt been printed all over the civilized world, and gorged over at thousands of breakfast tables by indignant citizens who wonder how much longer the "Nasty Chinese" is to be allowed a loose rein. This is the item—"An English lady has been attacked at Jaku." Some time last year the wife of one of the pilots at Taku was robbed, and had a scuffle with the thief, supposed to have been the house-boy, and on this date this intelligence is flashed around the globe as political news! Fortunately no one could possibly know where Jaku might be located. Let me have facts!

Dr. Elmore, Peruvian Minister, has reached here from Peking.—Shanghai Courier Correspondent.

NEWCHWANG.
Messrs. Bush, Brothers, write, on the 25th January:—“As usual, during the China New Year holidays, business is lost sight of, and we beg therefore to lay before you a few statistics of last year's trade, which have been supplied to us through the courtesy of the Commissioner of Customs:

Imports.—The increase in manufactures has not been much to the advantage of importers generally, as rates have not ruled over the values obtainable in the South, but stocks have nevertheless been well worked off, against purchases of produce, the total exports of which have fully kept up with arrivals of goods.

Opium.—This has fallen off from 1,303 chests last year to 840 chests, and of this small quantity there are still some 160 chests undelivered. In 1873 the consumption was 2,363 chests. Native drug is gradually but surely superseding its rival. Every season we find that the quality is improving, and as the authorities do not materially oppose the growth of the poppy, we may soon have to class opium with the exports.

Exports and Shipping.—Our table shows a great increase in the tonnage for this year, as compared with 1873 and 1874. Some few vessels which had been induced to come “seeking” towards the close of the port, left in ballast rather than accept the rates which were offered; but low as these were, better could not be obtained elsewhere.

The very high price of produce was due principally to the ordinary water traffic being prevented by an unusually dry season, and it could not be expected that shipowners would care to lay down pulse, bencake, oil, &c., at considerably higher values than had been ruling during the season, seeing that the exports were already greatly in excess of the two previous years.

Bullion, except so far as tribute money is concerned, was sent away in very small quantity, the trade having chiefly consisted in the healthy system of “Bartering.”

A STORY FROM SOOCHOW.

A somewhat romantic story has just reached us, the interest of which turns upon the practice of kidnapping children with a view to selling them into slavery. Three years ago, a respectable native of Soochow came and settled in Shanghai, bringing with him his son, a bright lad of thirteen or thereabouts, whom he apprenticed to a cap-maker living near the North Gate. Now the next door neighbour to this tradesman was an old woman; and one day, meeting the boy, whose name was Li, she asked him why he never went abroad to see the sights. “Come with me to the South Gate,” she said; “there is a grand theatre there, with hundreds of lamps outside, and plenty of music to listen to.” So the lad replied that he was quite willing, and off they started together. It struck him however as somewhat singular that they should get into a boat, but the old woman told him it was all right, and bade him go to sleep. The next morning when he woke up, he found they were at Kia-ding; and the marvelling what was going to happen next, he arrived, with his mysterious conductress, towards evening, at a house which appeared to him of a very suspicious description. He was a clever little chap, however, and that night instead of sleeping, he listened to the conversation through the chinks of the wall; and judging from what he heard that he was going to be sold as a slave to some stranger, he crept out under cover of the darkness and then fled, he knew not whither. Eventually he arrived at Soochow, footsore and penniless; but luckily he fell in with an old friend of his father who provided him with the means of getting home. Here again, however, he lost his way, and was befriended by a Ping-wang man; but falling sick from exposure and cold, his friend carried him out of the house and deposited him on the door-step of a temple called the Ling-ho See. Here the poor lad was found, half-dead with anxiety and illness, by a priest, who seemed to have been a very decent sort of fellow according to his lights. He took little Li in, cut off his pigtail, shaved his head, and turned him in half an hour into a budding youth. Meanwhile the poor father was almost distracted, seeking high and low for his lost child. At last a man from the neighbourhood happened to tell him, by the merest chance, that at a temple in his part of the country there was a little priest who had come from nobody knew where, and old Li started off at once to see him. He reached the temple, and sure enough there was his son with a bald head, muttering prayers. He turned round, recognised his father, and with a burst of joyful tears the two met once more, after a separation of three years. The worthy priest was grieved to part from the lad, and asked for $50 for his keep. This very moderate demand was immediately granted; and father and son arrived in Shanghai the other day,—the latter with a scrubby head of hair of only a fortnight's growth.—Shanghai Courier.

THE PORT OF WENCHOW.

In view of the probable speedy opening of Wenchow to foreign trade, we think it may not be uninteresting to our readers to give a few particulars of the general characteristics, physical and political, of the port in question. It has been visited by foreigners from time to time, and although little has been said of late years respecting its capacities and prospects, it appears that the authorities have kept an eye upon it as a place which might, at some undecided period, be developed in the interest of commerce. For we must not forget that the opening of new ports has a double aspect.

It is a mistake to regard the question simply from an outside and, we may add, scaphit point of view: the enlargement of commercial enterprise in China is calculated to benefit the Chinese themselves, and this is a fact which should not be lost sight of by the mercantile portion of our communities. It is natural, no doubt, for foreigners in China to fret and fume at the shrubs which are occasionally cast upon them by home writers, and the charge of selfish aims and narrow views which is so frequently brought against them: but it behoves them to guard against laying themselves open to such insinuations, and it is difficult to deny that, as a rule, the element of selfishness does enter, perhaps more than it should, into their calculations and their aims. We may therefore stop to remark, before going any further, that, as a matter of fact, the inhabitants of Wenchow have, for many years past, been most anxious that their trade should receive the impetus inseparable from an influx of foreign enterprise: they have viewed with feelings almost akin to jealousy the superior prosperity of Ningpo on the one side, and Foochow on the other; and we are therefore glad in the interest of the Chinese nation at large, whenever the Imperial Government so far extends the provisions of the foreign Treaties as to throw open fresh ports to the healthy influence of outside commerce, at the immediate instance of Western nations.

Wenchow, then, is a city which in itself embodies the elements of much commercial prosperity. It is charmingly situated some ten miles or so up the Wenchow river, and in addition to much natural beauty enjoys a most lovely climate. The approaches to the estuary of the river present some difficulty to navigation, for, numerous as they are, they are so full of shoals and sandbanks as to call for extreme wariness! Indeed only one is of any practical value. The channel which is thus at the disposal of foreign vessels has, however been well surveyed, and the dangers in using it are easily avoided. The city is even now a thriving one, and an enclosure in Mr. Bowra's Despatch in his Ningpo Series, 1869, contains much interesting information upon the subject. Amongst the public institutions of the place, we may mention the existence of a Foundling Hospital, supported by voluntary contributions and the rental of alluvial lands which are presented to it by the Government. The number of inmates varies from two to three hundred at a time: the boys are either apprenticed to some useful handicraft upon arriving at an age when they can earn their own livelihood, or are adopted by wealthy residents who are childless, while the girls are betrothed as wives or employed as house-servants. There is also a Beggar's Asylum, but in this institution Chinese Bumbledom appears to ride rampant, for so cruel is the treatment of the inmates that only those who are really starving will avail themselves of the charity. Commercially, the city is far from being unimportant. It has been said that the opening of Wenchow to foreign trade will have a serious effect, sooner or later, upon Foochow; but we believe that the only place at all likely to suffer at first are a few neighbouring coast ports of insignificant standing which during the last sixteen years have attracted the legitimate trade of Wenchow to themselves. The remark refers almost exclusively to the trade in tea. “Previous to the year 1861,” says the authority we quote, “this was the only port in the department at which tea was allowed to be exported; which, in a measure, made it the market for the trade of the surrounding country. The city was then in a flourishing condition. But in order to prevent the tea from falling into the hands of the T'ai-ping rebels, who overran the whole district during that year, this regulation was exchanged for the one now in force, which authorises the exportation of tea at any of the Custom-houses along the coast; consequently, the enormous trade formerly concentrated here now finds its way to all the minor ports on the seaboard.” The opening of the city will therefore re-divert this lost trade to itself again, and Wenchow will probably become an important emporium for the purchase and export of tea. An opium trade also exists, and a good business is done in timber, poles, and bamboo. The arrangements of the city, too, are such as to render the transaction of business easy, in detail: for the leading firms have their warehouses conveniently situated on the banks of the numerous canals surrounding the city, by which means the goods are conveyed from the ship's side to the godown without the expense of annoyance of coolies. It is also satisfactory to notice that the people are a well-disposed and friendly set, harbouring no absurd prejudices against foreigners, but anxious rather, to share the benefits of Western enterprise. “Yang-kwei-tsze,” “Fan-kwei,” and “Hung-moa,” are epithets quite unknown in this enlightened town.

We have before referred to the position of Wenchow as supported by a commercial basin, in the neighbouring interior, of no mean importance; and we may now supplement the statement with a few specific facts. Even in its present condition, it is by no means an oasis of activity in a desert of stagnation. Agriculture flourishes in the department where it lies. Twenty-seven miles North-east of the fu city, a peculiar description of tea grown, called An-shan, is celebrated throughout the Empire for its delicacy of flavour and purity. Rice, wheat, cotton, vegetable oil, and hemp are extensively cultivated. The annual export of alum from cities within easy distance amounts to no less than 75,000 piculs; the mineral is of exceptional excellence, while the supply is inexhaustible and the working of it entails a handsome profit. In addition to this, there are fields of iron and silver, although we have been unable to ascertain whether these products are to be found in any large quantities. But the facts that we have already adduced are, we think, sufficient to show that there is some inducement to give the new port a fair trial. Much can be said in its favour, in detail; the objections that we have met with in nearly every instance, deal with the question on general principles. We have already recorded our views on the opening of new ports, generally speaking, on public grounds; and we do not think that in the present instance we are likely to be convicted of having passed a rash or ill-considered judgment.—Celestial Empire.

THE TRADE OF HIAGO.

The results of the trade of this port for the year 1875, as shown by quite new statistics, are so nearly in accordance with what was expected from the perfectly well known recent state of business that we scarcely consider it necessary to draw special attention to any of the lines. The result, however, shown by the figures relating to tea, the chief export of the place,—an increased quantity with a decrease in value—seems to point that a change is taking place in the nature of the trade, and we find on enquiry that the opinion is held here by some that it is a great measure owing to a policy recently pursued by growers, which if persevered in will cause most serious injury to the foreign trade of the country. The first fact to be recognised is that importers in the United States—the market for Japan tea—will not give the prices they did, and we hear it alleged to be owing to the competition of China Green tea and a falling off in the quality of Japanese. Some years ago, in the China Green tea trade, high prices and a great deal of adulteration co-existed, and no doubt the Japan tea trade owes a great deal of its present position to the fact that it supplied home buyers with a pure kind of the article they wanted, but the Chinese have been quite sharp enough to find this out, and under the pressure of competition in this country, while steadily increasing the quantity produced, have overlooked the fact that they is necessary for their interests that they should improve at the same time the quality, and we are informed that they not only do not do this but that the quality of tea produced is deteriorating from a want of care in selection and preparation. To such a length has this already gone that we hear, notwithstanding the increased export, there are still large stocks of tea in the interior which the holders will not offer at such prices as exporters can afford to give. As the whole foreign trade of Japan hinges upon her exporting power, and as tea is one of her two most important exports, it is abundantly clear that unless tea growers give more attention to the quality of their produce, the whole foreign trade of the country is threatened with consequences of the most serious nature. Though we give these as the opinions of some of the leading houses here, and of their correspondents in the States, we do not endorse them as entirely correct, for we find that other persons who have at least equal opportunities of judging and whose opinions are entitled to as much consideration, refuse weight to two of the causes alleged to anything like an important extent, denying that Chinese competition has had any abnormal effect and asserting that while it may be true that the tea crop of the past season may not perhaps be universally considered as equal to the previous one, the lower prices in the New York market are almost entirely attributable to the general depression of trade, which has lately been felt in New York with special severity.

The other figures published by the Chamber of Commerce are not so unsatisfactory as they might have been, considering all things. Till trade recovers a solid basis, we decidedly prefer to see a falling off in imports maintained. Mousse de Laine, the monopoly of the trade in which article by German and French houses was pointed out by Mr. Acting Consul Annesley in his last Annual Report, is the most important port. The Grey shirting trade is entirely in the hands of Chinese, and will probably remain there as long as communication between this market and Shanghai is open and cheap, and Chinese traders here can obtain long credits by the influence of native associations and capitalists in China.—Hugo News.

THE COREAN PREPARATIONS FOR WAR.

Writing from Newchwang on the 11th Feb., a correspondent of the North-China Daily News, says:—“The Corean Embassy has passed; and having gathered a few notes, I give them to you, not because they are of much importance, but because it may please you to know the thoughts and sayings in Corea, at a time when Japan seems to be seeking a reason to invade that exclusive or conservative kingdom. At present, the country seems to be as peaceful as possible, and the young king's rule is skilful and good. Even last year it could be said that, if the words attributed to him on certain occasions were correct, he showed himself to be full of good, sound, common sense; and this verdict is confirmed by the few particulars which I am now able to lay before you. It should not be forgotten that the King is only 24 years old, and that under the Regent (his father's) long guardianship, he had but too many opportunities for ruining both his reason and his health. Now he governs by himself, and desires to see and judge for himself, having called to his service such men only as are celebrated for their prudence and good reputation. The elder brother of the late Regent, and consequently the paternal uncle of the king, is one of the principal and most influential Councillors of the Courts.

Last autumn, a man-of-war (nationality not known) dropped anchor at the island Teung-tjong, near Woodee or Timber Island, and the long-boat with some sailors pulled to the Isle of Aie-rou, near Kang-ho, for the purpose of getting fresh water and buying salt; so say the natives. The Mandarin of Teung-tjong immediately sent soldiers to attack the party, and the boat was fired upon with rifles and arrows, but got off to the ship, although pursued all the way by the Coreans. The European man-of-war fired a few shots, and caused the destruction of two houses on Teung-tjong, and then cleared away. The Mandarin, it seems, bolted as soon as he heard the first shot, and received the following despatch, by order of the King:—“Why did you fire on a vessel that was quietly at anchor, doing harm to no one? and then why did you run away, like a coward? You are not worthy to be a Mandarin.” Thereupon that official was degraded and sent into exile; the district of Teung-tjong was abolished, and has no Mandarin, but depends on that of Kang-ho, in future. I wonder what man-of-war it was, and what its object in these waters could be!

About this time (last autumn), the young King found out that despachos were not only opened, but falsified, and one day he became enraged, and issued the following order:—

“Everybody seems to be aware of whatever affects the government long before I am made acquainted with the news; what does it mean? Letters and despachos to my address are not only opened and read, but they are falsified, in order that only what is agreeable may reach me, and that I may not know what is injurious; so that it is impossible for me to ascertain the actual state of affairs. This must cease. I now order that all despachos addressed to me, either from the provinces or from other countries, or ships, shall be at once handed to me, even before the ministers or other dignitaries see them. If there are any reprehensible acts, they shall be made known to me at once.”

It is difficult not to be amused at such a maxim. Yet it is really called for by the necessities of the case.

Let us touch now upon the subject of war, which, although always imminent, is not declared between Corea and Japan. I read in the papers that two Corean officers have been banished for interference with the Japanese Ambassador who went to Corea for the purpose of entering into a Treaty with that power, &c. My Corean informer tells me that he never heard of the matter at all. The Japanese have been navigating continually about the Eastern and South-Eastern seas of Corea, but not a soul has heard about their having come to Kang-ho, or to the Capital. On the East coast they have tried to ascend the rivers, and on one occasion they got well up, no one seeming inclined to stop them, and not a single shot being fired. That is all that is said about the Japanese. All, however, believe, in the coming war, One of the great mandarins has addressed a supplication to the King, begging him to make preparations for war. The petition concludes thus:—“If there be no war next year, let the King do with me as he will. Let me be killed.” Surely, added my man, one must feel pretty sure, to write so strongly.

There are great preparations in Corea to resist the Japanese. Vessels of war are being built on quite new principles. There are two kinds—the Tortoise boat, and the Duck-boat. There are two of the first kind finished at the Capital, but although my informant has seen them, he cannot say very much about them, as things are conducted most secretly, at any rate as much as possible. I learned from him, however, that these boats would contain about 50 or 60 men, that they were covered over with iron, and could be propelled under water. The Duck-boat differs from the other, and has a solid ram projecting at the bow like a duck's head, on which a tampon is placed.

I don't wish to give any opinion as to the value of these wonderful inventions. Secondly, torpedoes in large quantities are being constructed. Take a large iron bullet hollowed out, with iron points outside, these are intended to fix the engine to the hull of the vessel against which it is to be steered; the bullet is filled with powder, and a fuse is attached, in proportion to the time necessary for it to reach the victim. It is only necessary to launch this torpedo in the direction required, and it is bound to get fixed, when the result will be total extinction of the enemy. I leave the result to be imagined, for at present they have only been able to judge by experiments conducted under favorable circumstances, but which, however, have satisfied their pride in these wonderful inventions.

At the first experiment, when they put one of these torpedoes under an empty vessel, the mast was jumped out about 60 yards in the air, but the vessel did not sink. On the experiment being tried with a junk full of stones, the vessel was divided into pieces. Thirdly—they are also making a new kind of bomb, loaded with all manner of shrapnel (grape?) When the bomb falls, the outside breaks, and its contents spread destruction on all sides. Some one must have given the Coreans a notion as to these inventions; and they seem to have some confidence in their power. It proves that they want to defend themselves, and that they desire to be as well up in the means as they believe in Japan to be.

To conclude, I must tell you that in the chief district of the Northern province, the Coreans wanted to have a big cannon on a small junk. When the cannon was fired, everything disappeared under water, much to the amusement of the numerous spectators who lined the banks. Vessel, cannon, artillerymen—the whole lot—made a dive. Fortunately the junk came to the surface again, and the victims of the accident were only frightened; but I fancy next time they will prefer a small cannon on a big junk. I am sorry I cannot send you anything more interesting this time, especially as you only get news annually.

INTERNATIONAL COINAGE.

As the avenues of trade and commerce across continents and oceans become more and more developed, shortening the time in which it takes one people to communicate with another, and intensifying and more intimately mixing their mutual dependence, the growing needs of an international monetary unit ever increases. The Memorial of the Meteorological Society submitted some time since to the International Congress will, therefore, be found of interest, both for its suggested solution of the problem presented by the discord of our currencies and the necessity for or supreme advantage to be derived from their unification. The Society is now petitioning Congress to adopt metric weights in our gold coinage. The actual dollar at present is less than one-third of one per cent. in excess of one and a half gram, the weight it urges for our dollar, the ideal dollar, our practical unit, fluctuates in value daily more than that. The Japanese Government two years ago made their monetary unit, the yen, one and a half gram of standard gold, nine-tenths fine, and three months since the Argentine Republic adopted the same weight and quality for its hard dollar—peso fuerte—which is made by law the unit of their system. The idea was approved by the Geneva Congress in 1874, when a committee was appointed to consider the best means of promoting this subject. It is also said to be favorably regarded by the present Committee on Banking and Currency and Weights and Measures.—Acta California.
